

Navigating EU Supply Chain Laws:

A comprehensive training program for exporters from Asia

The implementation of environmental and social standards is becoming an increasingly relevant aspect in business relationships across global supply chains. Many German and other European companies face legal obligations to implement human rights and environmental due diligence processes and to collaborate with companies in their supply chains on relating topics. In many cases, buyers consider the implementation of the ESG requirements to be an important requirement for the (continuation of the) business relationship.

This training supports exporters from Asia to implement an effective ESG management system in preparation for growing buyer expectations and to position themselves as the supplier of choice.
